Pre-Qualification vs. Pre-Approval

A pre-qualification informally determines the maximum amount you are eligible to borrow. You'll supply an overview of your financial history to the lender, including income, assets, debts, and credit score. It's not a guarantee of a loan, but it's a great idea to get one before you start looking at homes to know how much you can afford. Also, when it comes time to make an offer, you'll have what you need to give sellers confidence that you'll be approved for a loan.

A pre-approval is similar, but it usually requires documentation and verification proving your income, assets, and debts, as well as a credit check.

Why Rent When You Could Possibly Own?

Some say mortgage loans are impossible to obtain without perfect credit and 20% down. Want the truth? These are the 3 basic factors for qualifying for a home loan.

Income

If you have a job or steady source of income, you're off to a great start. Especially if you're already able to pay your rent on time each month.

Assets

You rarely need a 20% down payment. There are many programs that will work with 5%, 3.5% and sometimes even 0% down.

Credit

If you pay your bills on time and avoided major issues, it's likely your credit is in good shape. Requirements vary, but there are still flexible loan options.
